Barriers Broken, Pathways Cleared*

By Roy Wilkins

JUST six weeks more than fifty years ago the organizing conference of what was to be the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was held here in New York City.

In conference in a building in East 22nd Street and in a public meeting in the famed Cooper Union auditorium, some 250 to 300 white and colored conferees considered a gloomy picture of race relations. Grimly realistic, but undaunted, they rose from their deliberations with a blueprint for an attack upon evil, for the attainment of the citizenship that was to have come out of Appomattox, and for the re-vitalization of the great American charters of liberty:

the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

We have completed this week the fiftieth annual gathering of Americans of both races who have answered the call of the founders for "all the believers in democracy to join in . . . the discussion of present evils, the voicing of protests, and the renewal of the struggle for civil and political liberty."

So dark was the day of 1909 that William L. Bulkley, a Brooklyn school principal and a conferee, declared pessimistically: "We are 46 years from the Emancipation Proclamation, and yet today so widespread is this race-oppression . . . that at this rate of retrogression, in 46 years more, the then 20,000,000 colored people will be veritable serfs."

Well, in our fifty years, Negro and white citizens, spearheaded by the NAACP, have proved Professor Bulkley's prophecy to be wrong. If he were here it is certain that he would thankfully and joyfully acknowledge the error.

The evils have been attacked—courageously, skilfully and relentlessly. The protests have been voiced—loudly, continuously and fearlessly. And the struggle for civil and political liberty has been pressed with ingenuity, with determination and with vigor.

BATTLES AND VICTORIES

There is little need in this short summary to detail the steps of progress, for these are history. The story of the broken barriers, the cleared pathways, the higher and higher pinnacles of achievement are written in the hearts and spirits of the black men and women of this generation and in those of their children.

It is written, too, in the hearts and minds of white men and women, for each victory for us has been a victory for them. William Lloyd Garrison, in his message to the 1909 conference, declared with terrible truth: "The republican experiment is at stake, every tolerated wrong to the Negro reacting with double force upon white citizens guilty of faithlessness to their brothers."

It is difficult, indeed, to single out any one aspect of the past five decades as the greatest or the most significant. There were battles and victories in every one of those years and on scores of fronts: lynching and mob violence, justice in the courts, voting, employment, housing, education, travel, recreation, government, and human dignity. Every one of us, from the personal experiences of ourselves, our relatives or friends, can recall what a particular skirmish was like, how the ebb and flow of a strategic battle went.

But it may well be that the greatest stride of all those years was the recovery of confidence, the inner vindication of ability, the conquest of fear, the fashioning and the wearing of the shining and respectful armor of men who know themselves and know, too, their rendezvous with destiny.

In this armor the perils of the road ahead hold no terror for us. The small schemes and petty animosities of little men, full of jealousy and fear, are but passing irritations. Their words of ridicule and hatred, old as man is old, are like dead and fallen leaves, whipped hither and yon by autumn winds before the burying of winter. In the sure spring of our success their slurs will be forgotten — even forgiven — as we have forgiven the derelictions of their forefathers.

Here in the mid-twentieth century we are entering a new phase of the long struggle for a stronger, a more perfect Western democratic society, which means, of course, a society in which all men will approach more

"THANK YOU REVEREND" . . . Says NAACP executive secretary Roy Wilkins to Reverend Dr. J. Raymond Henderson (R) of Los Angeles, California. Dr. Henderson's Second Baptist church gave $11,000 to the NAACP. All told, Dr. Henderson's national church-fund-raising project collected $45,000 for the Association, which was reported during the 50th annual convention. closely the ideal of individual freedom and equality under self-government.

Once there was debate as to whether America's Negro minority should be included in such a society. Indeed, there was once debate as to whether members of that minority were human beings endowed with minds, hearts and souls. But reason and morality and inescapable reality have prevailed. Except for a scattered handful of throwback cultists and their rag-tag camp followers, nothing remains of the animal school of thought. No longer has it any standing in the councils and covenants of societies of free men. The philosophy of segregation, with its handmaiden, discrimination, has been ruled out of American democratic government. There remains only segregation as a practice to be rooted out.

Our task, then, is clear: In the years ahead we must move into full, equal, and responsible partnership with all our fellow-citizens. We have the tools, the most important of which are the freedom and opportunity to organize and to act. This is a blessing which is denied to those living under Communist distatorships and, let us emphasize, is denied, also, to millions of our fellow Americans who live in certain parts of the South.

Our opponents have been seeking to label the NAACP and all those who support the Supreme Court and desegregation as communist, but their false accusations cannot hide the dictatorship in their own Deep South which is a true blood-brother to bolshevism.

SEGREGATIONIST POLITBURO

Even white Southerners are denied freedom of speech on the segregation question. They dare not disagree with the line laid down by the Segregationist Politburo. One word or one act of dissent and reprisals fall upon them as suddenly as any ordered by the Kremlin. In Hungary the Soviets used tanks to beat down freedom. In sections of our South the dictators have used guns and mobs and bombs.

We of the NAACP are not afraid of free debate. We are not afraid to argue our case in the arena of public opinion. We are not afraid to seek a test of our rights in the courts of the land. We are not afraid to play the game, to abide by the rules, and to accept the call of the umpire.

Our opponents are afraid. For all their cries of superiority, they are fearful of a fair contest. Men who are really superior do not seek to change the rule book as does Senator Herman Talmadge of Georgia with his proposal to amend the Constitution. Men who are really superior do not denounce and defy the courts of the land when they lose a decision.

Men who are really superior do not stoop to become "fixers" through such a sneaky proposal as is contained in H. R. 3, the Smith bill, which passed the House and which would curtail the Supreme Court and throttle the NAACP.

Men who are really superior do not slander little children because of their color.

No, our opponents are afraid and their fear has led them to excesses which, in this past year, have lost them much sympathy and support.

But we are not fearful. We have come too far, against too many odds, with too many dead and living dead behind us to be afraid in this new day.

WILL USE BALLOT

We believe in government by consent of the governed, and we mean to have some of that kind of government for ourselves and our children. Where we have the ballot we intend to use it. Where we are denied the ballot we intend to get it.

Between now and the election of 1960 we will swell the registration rolls with new names by the hundreds of thousands and with these names we will talk to mayors and governors and to officials of both major parties. We will talk to senators and congressmen and to those men who seek the nomination for the Presidency and the Vice Presidency. We will be heard at the nominating conventions next summer in Los Angeles and in Chicago. With names on the rolls of voters, one does not have to shout, one can merely talk and one will be heard.

In the meantime, give an eye and an ear to the Congress. It must pass a strong civil rights bill, preferably the Douglas-Javits-Celler bill, if parties and candidates expect any support from Negro voters next year.

The civil rights bill which has just been approved by a sub-committee of the Senate has been described as "needing some meat on its bones." This is probably the understatement of the year. As a matter of fact, it is doubtful whether the bones themselves are strong enough to hang together. The Congress is up to its old tricks, with Southern Democratic Senators in key committee chairmanships using their influence to bottle up any kind of civil rights bill, weak or strong.

The time may come, and sooner than later, when Negro citizens, sick and disgusted over the Dixiecrat chairmen in the House and Senate, may have to decide to try to vote the party out of office which permits these men from another age to choke us to death.

Less than three months ago we had the Mack Charles Parker lynching in Poplarville, Mississippi. From reports we believe to be authentic the names of the men who did this cowardly mob murder are known. The evidence against them is strong. In any decent society they would be brought to court, tried, and if found guilty, punished.

But the legislation which would speed this action is being held up by the committee of which Senator James O. Eastland of Mississippi is chairman. It is not too much to say that lynchers in Mississippi feel safe as long as they know that their Senator is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

INTOLERABLE SITUATION

This is an intolerable situation. There are many fine Democrats in the House and Senate. Some of the bravest and most sincere soldiers in the civil rights army are Democrats like Paul H. Douglas of Illinois and other stalwarts in both Houses. But Negro citizens cannot stand by forever while men are lynched and their killers go free because of the sabotage of federal legislation by Dixiecrat committee chairmen. Unless the Democratic leadership talks sense to its Southern members, we may have to try to get some new committee chairmen of a different political party.

No one enters a Democratic party family fight unless he wants to get hurt and we, therefore, have nothing to say about the criticism of the Democrats in Congress by National Chairman Paul Butler except that so far as civil rights legislation is concerned, Butler is right, for Democrats in Congress have produced a big round zero. And zero is not much of a platform on which to ask for votes.

We know that the Republican party is not perfect and that it has its shifty operators, also.

These have traded with the enemy and have failed, also, to support the moderate, but helpful, Eisenhower Administration proposals. As they did in 1957, they have collaborated with the Southern Democrats in eliminating the old—and necessary—Part III language from the bill.

But if a change should be made, at least, we will have the men of the Republican party in states where we can vote for or against them, according to their records. At present, we cannot vote for or against an Eastland.

People are forever crying and asking what they can do as individuals to help in the great crusade for rights. Well, they can do a simple, but a very powerful thing: they can register and vote. The general public would be surprised to learn how powerful is the impact of a heavy registration upon political leaders and candidates. We do not need to blow trumpets and fly banners. We do not need to shake our fists and shout. All we need to do is to register and then to vote. These acts will shake loose double-talk and double-dealing faster than you can say Jack Robinson.

We of the NAACP do not presume to tell people for whom they should vote. We endorse no candidates. We spell the record and let the voter be the judge. The solution of many of our problems and the destiny of our citizens may well rest in the judgment of the individual voter in the polling booth.

NAACP OPPOSES ALL INEQUALITIES

Never fear that we shall not use all the other methods which have served so well in the past. We shall continue to go to court. We shall press without let-up for desegregated schools so that our children may have their birthright. We shall work in the halls of the legislatures, local state and federal, to secure the enactment of laws which will make real the guarantees of American citizenship. We will do this over and over again, even in the face of the outrageous politics that still blocks an FEPC bill in the Illinois Senate.

We will range up and down the whole list of inequalities: voting, housing, employment, public accommodation, and education—including an intensified campaign to rid the North of de facto school segregation and other discriminations. For the South is not the only guilty party, although it is folly to argue that the South should not change because the North is often hypocritical on these issues. The snobbery of the North

Fiftieth Annual Convention— A Jubilee for Civil Rights

By Gloster B. Current

THE NAACP's fiftieth annual convention, which opened in the New York Coliseum on Monday, July 13, and closed with a mass rally at the Polo Grounds on Sunday, July 19, was a round of public meetings, workshops, policy debates, luncheons, dinners and social affairs. When it was all over, more than 2,000 tired delegates, from many parts of the world and forty-four of the fifty states, agreed that it was one of the best, if not the greatest, conventions held in the history of the Association.

Participating in the deliberations were 1,265 voting delegates and 833 alternates; youth was represented by more than 500 delegates and alternates; and an estimated 45,000 members and visitors attended all sessions, including visitors from Nigeria, French Guinea, Holland, and Central America.

Because an NAACP convention usually brings together the experienced, the battle-scarred veterans of the civil-rights struggle, the newcomers and the idealists, as well as the young eager to learn, it offers a forum for officers, campaign workers, fund-raisers and heroes in the desegregation fight to compare notes and to plan strategy. It presents an opportunity for Southern delegates to rest from their arduous labors, to get away for a brief respite from jim-crow living, and to obtain a breath of fresh air and renew their energies for the task ahead.

The Golden Jubilee Convention not only brought together today's leaders, but was attended by some whose activities span the years since the organization's founding in 1909. Among those actively participating in the sessions were the Association's president since 1939, Arthur B. Spingarn; Mrs. William English Walling, widow of one of the founders; and retired CME Bishop J. A. Hamlett of Kansas City, a charter member of the Topeka branch, who has been a longtime supporter.

The "keynote address was read by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, vice-chairman of the Board of Directors, in the absence of Dr. Channing H. Tobias, who was ill. Dr. Tobias' speech reviewed the outstanding achievements of the NAACP over a fifty-year period and pointed out that until the Supreme Court's decision of May 17, 1954, the Association's efforts had received scant attention.

"Largely because of the success of our activities," Dr. Tobias concluded, "life for the Negro in America today is far different from what it was in 1909." He called for continued effort to end oppression everywhere.

POLITICAL SOUNDING BOARD

The importance of the Convention as a political sounding board was apparent in the appearance of outstanding political leaders as speakers and guests.

In his welcome address, New York's Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, whose presidential ambitions have been increasingly noted, chose the Convention as a platform from which to announce that he would recommend to the next meeting of the New York State Legislature adoption of a fair-housing law patterned after New York City's Shark-ey-Brown-Isaacs measure. His statement is significant, because only a few weeks earlier, during the closing days of the State Legislature, Governor Rockefeller had turned down a similar request made by a delegation from the New York State Conference asking support of the pending Metcalf-Baker Bill, a fair housing measure similar to the New York City law.

Governor Rockefeller also spoke out strongly against segregation and discrimination in other areas of life.

An unusual feature of the Convention on Tuesday evening was the drama "Fifty Steps Toward Freedom," written by William Branch, directed by Dick Campbell, and narrated by Broadway actor Ozzie Davis, which depicted historic scenes from NAACP history.

STIRRING ADDRESSES

Stirring addresses on Wednesday evening, July 15, were given by several outstanding churchmen, including Bishop William J. Walls, senior bishop AME Zion Church; Dr. William Holmes Borders, president Fraternal Council of Negro Churches and pastor of the Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Georgia; Bishop George W. Baber, president, Council of Bishops, AME Church; Bishop B. Julian Smith, presiding bishop, CME Church.

The feature of the evening was a report of $45,000 raised by churches throughout the nation in response to an appeal that had been made by presiding officer, Dr. J. Raymond Henderson, pastor, Second Baptist Church, Los Angeles, California. Dr. Henderson, whose church donated $11,000, originated the fund-raising broadcast by CBS radio, coast-to-coast, reviewed the fifty-year struggle by NAACP lawyers to obtain justice in the courts. He observed that the important significance of legal victories "in all the cases which secured due process of law for Negro defendants" is that these victories "not only protected Negro defendants but have been cited and used repeatedly in state after state to guarantee due process to defendants who are not Negroes." Marshall paid tribute to the efforts in earlier years of Arthur B. Spingarn, president of the NAACP, who, as a volunteer chairman of the Legal Redress Committee, obtained the services of outstanding lawyers, such as Moorefield Storey and Louis Marshall, to join him in handling NAACP litigation without fee. "This type of expert legal talent and enlightened legal action created a national respect for the NAACP which makes it possible for us to operate as we do today," the prominent civil rights attorney said. "All in all, therefore, in so far as the legal work is concerned, I dare say the NAACP will forever be more indebted to Arthur B. Spingarn and Charles H. Houston than any of the other individual lawyers," Mr. Marshall said.

The annual Freedom Fund Dinner, held Thursday, July 16, in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, was attended by 1,500 NAACP workers and members. Addresses were given by Thurgood Marshall, special counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc., and Hon. Elmer A. Carter, chairman, New York State Committee Against Discrimination. Other speakers included Roy Wilkins, Mrs.

SAGE REMARKS

In concluding, Mr. Marshall sagely remarked: "In truth, we in the NAACP and all other fair-minded people who are interested in democracy, realize that while what we are doing can be interpreted as benefiting Negroes, as such, actually it is in the interest of our government and democracy in general. We are, therefore, proud to take a back seat and let our government, through its Information Service, and its Foreign Service quote case after case won by the NAACP as examples of how right and decent our government is. . . ."

Four thousand persons, the largest to attend an evening session, were present to hear two of America's outstanding ministers: Dr. Charles H. Wesley, president of Central State College, Ohio; and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Montgomery, Alabama, protest leader.

Dr. Wesley listed the thought patterns concerning the Negro from the earliest periods in American life down to the present day. "The achievement of Negro Americans as a population group has been made in spite of inadequate backgrounds," he said. He then demonstrated how concepts of Negro inferiority based both upon the slave system and its aftermath, which are accepted as fixed and unchanging absolutes, have been built into the thought pattern of the American people. Not only physical differences, but also mental capacities and attainments were subjected to investigation. Statistics as to disease, crime, delinquency and illegitimacy were used to prove mental and moral inabilities and lesser attainments for Negroes.

Dr. Wesley suggested four remedial measures to be used in attacks upon American stereotypes about the Negro:

First, "let us exert every effort to overcome the background misconceptions about Negroes; secondly, conduct "campaigns to eliminate the objectionable traits in Negroes which arouse opposition from others. In nearly all cases where Negroes have manifested modest being and good manners, community relationships have been generally helped. On the contrary, exhibitionism, boisterousness in voice as well as in action are oftentimes resented. Cultured persons, whoever they are, object to the overt exhibitions which occur in public places." Work must be done among youth "for higher standards of courtesy, ethics, morality, the reduction of vulgarity, coarseness, blasphemy, and the increase of personal culture and cultural appreciation of the best. Thirdly, "become active in publicizing the facts which are creditable to Negro-Americans." Fourthly, work for "higher scholarship and achievement on the part of youth."

The eloquent Dr. King was at his best on Friday evening, July 17, when he paid tribute to the youth leaders of Oklahoma, Kansas and Virginia while citing their achievements. He said that these young people were being honored because of their "quiet yet intrepid courage"; that "through their powerful positive action these young people have made it palpably clear that segregation is a moral and social evil that they will never passively accept."

Dr. King, apparently mindful of the recent controversial Robert Williams case, also explained his attitude toward violence:

We all realize that there will probably be some sporadic violence during this period of transition, and people will naturally seek to protect their property and person, but for the Negro to privately or publicly call for retaliatory violence as a strategy during this period would be the gravest tragedy that could befall us. It would be most impractical. Many of our oppressors would be more than happy for us to turn to violence. It would give them an opportunity to wipe out many innocent Negroes under the pretence that they were inciting a riot. . . .

The closing rally at the Polo Grounds, despite threatening weather, drew a crowd of 23,000 who sat through intermittent showers to hear a galaxy of outstanding speakers from Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe, premier of Eastern Nigeria; Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, Roy Wilkins, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell and Jackie Robinson, to Mayor Robert F. Wagner. Music for the occasion was furnished by the popular gospel soloist Mahalia Jackson.

Wilkins called on the delegates to increase registration and voting and promised that the NAACP will talk "to senators and congressmen and to those men who seek the nomination for the Presidency and the Vice-Presidency. We will be heard at the nominating conventions next summer in Los Angeles and in Chicago."

ASSOCIATION PRAISED

Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe praised the Association and said that it had been an inspiration to him and his colleagues in their struggles for national independence.

Another speaker at the closing rally was Harlem's fiery Congressman Adam Clayton Powell who urged Negro leaders to pay more attention to discrimination and segregation in the North.

Dr. Ralph Bunche, who introduced Dr. Azikiwe, said that "racial segregation in all its guises must go, and completely; in Biloxi as well as New York City. Dr. Bunche was roundly applauded because of his recent bout with jim-crow at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills, which had denied membership to his son. "In my thinking," he said, "there is no discrimination arising out of racial or religious prejudice, which should ever be tolerated."

Other speakers included Jackie Robinson; the Most Reverend John J. MacGuire, auxiliary bishop and vicar-general of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York; Rabbi Max Davidson, president of the Synagogue Council of America; the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.; and Ambassador Diallo Telli of the Republic of Guinea.

CONVENTION WORKSHOPS

Participants in the housing workshop on Tuesday morning, July 14, included Charles Abrams, former commissioner, New York State Commission Against Discrimination and Dr. Robert C. Weaver, housing consultant and former New York rent administrator and member of the NAACP National Board of Directors. Others were Dr. Frank Horne, executive director, Mayor's Committee on Inter-Committee Relations; Madison S. Jones, race relations consultant, New York City Housing Authority; and Jack E. Wood, housing secretary of the NAACP.

Dr. Weaver said that though racial residential patterns vary from city to city, the NAACP policy on housing is clear: "We oppose forced residential segregation and we stand for open occupancy."

Against Discrimination, said that "the most critical aspect of the civil rights question was the place of 'law' as an instrument for protecting civil rights and liberties."

The Tuesday afternoon workshop, "Equal Justice Under Law," featured addresses by United States Senator Hugh Scott, Republican of Pennsylvania, and Attorney Oliver W. Hill, Richmond, Virginia, chairman, Legal Redress Committee of the Virginia State Conference. Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago, Illinois, a member of the National Board of Directors, presided.

Attorney Hill derided those who say "we are moving too fast" and pointed to the fact that the first suit "by a Negro to secure desegregated public school education was instituted more than a hundred and ten years ago."

Attorney Hill also suggested that Negroes try to communicate with the segregationists through pamphlets and leaflets, thus factually refuting their propaganda. . . .

POLITICS AND CIVIL RIGHTS

Featured speaker in the workshop on "Politics and Civil Rights," Wednesday morning, was Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, Democrat of Minnesota. The session was presided over by Attorney Robert Franklin, president of the Ohio State Conference and the Hon. Theodore M. Berry, Cincinnati, member of the NAACP National Board of Directors. Other participants included Richard C. Scammon, director of elections research, Governmental Affairs Institute; Herbert Tucker, Boston, Massachusetts; Arnold Aronson, New York, Clarence Mitchell, Washington, D. C., and Harry Cole, Baltimore, Maryland.

Senator Humphrey, on whose availability for the presidency there was wide speculation, pleased the delegates with a hard-hitting speech in full support of civil rights.

Clarence Mitchell, the Association's hard-working lobbyist, also spoke at the session and charged that congressional opponents of civil-rights legislation "keep segregation alive, healthy, fat and sassy."

Walter P. Reuther, president, United Automobile Workers, AFL-CIO; A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL-CIO; and Morris Iushewitz, secretary, Central Trades and Labor Council of New York, were the principal speakers Wednesday afternoon at the plenary session on "organized labor and the NAACP."

Mr. Reuther said that the civil rights issue "can be America democracy's Achilles heel in Asia and Africa where the great millions of the human family live and they are looking at America and they are not going to judge the worth of American democracy by the brightness of the chrome on our new Cadillacs. We are going to be judged by what we do in a practical way to translate into practical terms in the lives of people these noble professions that we talk about on the fourth of July."

PUBLIC RELATIONS

The importance of using public relations and communication techniques in the battle for men's mind to accomplish NAACP objectives was discussed at a plenary workshop Thursday morning by three experts in the field: Marion Wright, Linville, N. C., vice-president, Southern Regional Council; Harold L. Oram, New York, N. Y., president Oram Associates; and the Association's public relations director, Henry Lee Moon.

Mr. Wright warned of the attempt by Southern segregationists to spread their propaganda in the North, "proclaiming that desegregation is a Communist device and that the Supreme Court is a tool of Moscow." The Southern story is presented through radio, full page "ads" and speeches, seeking northern aid in southern denial of constitutional rights.

Mr. Oram said that NAACP leaders must call things by their right names and "have the numbers and the money to do the public relations job that is required."

Friday afternoon's workshop on the "Efficient Conduct of Branch Business" brought together NAACP leaders Mrs. Lucinda Gordon, Milwaukee; Florence V. Lucas, president, Jamaica, N. Y., branch; Theodore Jones, president Chicago branch; Barbee W. Durham, executive secretary, Columbus, Ohio; Arthur Johnson, Hartford, Connecticut; Chester I. Lewis, Wichita, Kansas; and Mrs. Marion Jordon, Pittsburgh.

Three business sessions of the Convention—Monday afternoon, at which the convention was organized; Friday and Saturday morning legislative sessions—were charged with excitement because of the Robert Williams case and an appeal from the decision of the National Board chartering a branch in the Department of Welfare, the election of members of the National Nominating Committee and the Procedure

Committee, as well as selection of the time and place of the 1961 convention, and adoption of resolutions.

WILLIAMS CASE

At the organization session Monday afternoon, presided over by Attorney Jawn L. Sandifer, chairman legal redress committee, New York State Conference of Branches, it was announced by the chairman that because of the interest in the Williams case (disciplining by the National Board of Directors on June 8 of Robert F. Williams for making a statement advocating violence) that Mr. Williams had been advised to present his appeal to the Resolutions Committee and the Convention would have an opportunity to take action at one of the legislative sessions when the Resolutions Committee presents its report.

Mr. Williams was given a hearing before the full Resolutions Committee on Thursday morning. Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood, AME Zion Church, Washington, presided over the hearing. Mr. Williams' case was presented by his attorney Conrad Lynn. General Counsel Robert F. Carter appeared for the Association. Mr. Williams also testified in his own behalf.

At the legislative session Friday morning, the Convention unanimously adopted the "Preamble" to the Resolutions Committee's report in which there appeared a strong statement reaffirming the Association's program of "seeking to secure our goal through lawful means." The resolution further stated:

We abhor violence. We reject violence as a way to achieve any of the objectives which we and other fair-minded people seek for all Americans without regard to race or color. In rejecting violence, we do not deny but reaffirm the right of individual and collective self-defense against unlawful assaults.

The NAACP has consistently over the years supported this right by defending those who have exercised the right of self-defense particularly in the Arkansas Riot Case, the Sweet Case in Detroit, the Columbia, Tenn., Riot cases and the Ingram case in Georgia.

Having adopted this reaffirmation of basic policy, the Convention next considered the report of its Resolution Committee on the Williams case.

The Resolutions Committee reported that in a unanimous opinion it found:

That the findings by the Committee on Branches adopted unanimously by the Board of Directors after full and fair hearing at which Mr. Williams, his counsel and witnesses were present, established that the statements made by Mr. Williams were not disassociated from his position as president of the NAACP branch and that at the time and circumstance of their utterance suggested violence as a means of redress of wrongs and not in self-defense of rights of person or property.

That the findings and conclusions adopted by the Board of Directors were in all particulars in accordance with procedures and policies established by the Association.

It is therefore recommended that the request of Robert F. Williams for rescission of the action of the Board of Directors by this Convention be denied.

During the two-hour debate, presided over by Attorney Oliver W. Hill of Richmond, Virginia, substituting for Judge Carol R. Johnson, who was ill, twenty-nine delegates spoke—twenty-one for the motion and eight against, including Robert Williams.

Mrs. Bates made an eloquent appeal to the convention to sustain the Board of Directors. She pointed to the attacks made upon her home in Little Rock and the efforts of segregationists to destroy the NAACP. She told of seeing Williams at a street corner meeting in Harlem attacking the NAACP. The Williams' statement would provide material for racist groups, she said.

Speaker after speaker from the South, as well as attorneys engaged in school desegregation battles, pointed out the folly of Mr. Williams' intemperate statement and urged upholding the suspension.

Williams, in an impassioned appeal, asked the delegates "not to come crawling to these whites on your hands and knees and make me a sacrificial lamb."

Voting under the unit rule, a rule agreed upon by the seven regions to the effect that the majority of votes on any proposition would be cast as a unit, the convention adopted unanimously by 781 to 0, the report of the Resolutions Committee denying rescission of the suspension. Press accounts stated that 17 voted against the motion, but the correct tally recorded a unanimous vote against Williams.

Williams later announced in the press that he would not appeal to the Courts as had been intimated earlier by his supporters.

The Convention dealt with another controversial issue, that of chartering additional branches in a single city, by recommending to the Board of Directors "that a prompt and full study be made of all aspects of the problems and benefits involved in the establishment of branches or other units of the Association within the same geographical areas and in other organizations, including multiple branches already created."

The delegates elected four members to the seven-man National Nominating Committee: Joshua Thompson, Ambler, Pennsylvania; Edward M. Turner, Detroit; Evelyn Roberts, St. Louis, Missouri; and Robert D. Robertson, Norfolk, Virginia. Named to the committee by the Board were Dr. Harry Greene, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Dr. Nathan K. Christopher, Cleveland, Ohio; and Dr. George D. Flemmings, Fort Worth, Texas.

A Convention Procedure Committee to prepare rules for the next convention was elected: Mrs. Mabel Robinson, Madison, New Jersey; Maude Alice Lee, Gary, Indiana; and Dr. B. E. Murph, Laurel, Mississippi.

The next convention, the fifty-first, will be held in St. Paul, Minnesota.

The American Negro in College, 1958-1959

IN this, its forty-eight annual educational number, The Crisis once more presents only a partial picture of the Negro student in college and of the 1959 Negro college graduate. Since "mixed schools" no longer keep records of their students by race, this survey includes information from Negro institutions only. We have to depend, we must repeat, upon volunteer information from registrars and individuals, since we have no staff to pursue statistics down to the last graduate. Many graduates themselves prefer not to be counted, and many do not send in their information or photographs until after the educational number has been published. Many institutions likewise, as in previous years, do not return our questionnaires.

Figures collected by The Crisis indicate a total enrollment of 61,680 students in the 56 institutions reporting. Last year the figure was 53,273 for the fifty-two reporting institutions. Last year, however, Howard, the largest Negro institution, did not report. Of this total, 56,831 are undergraduate and 2,928 graduate students. Of the students who graduated, 6,725 received various types of bachelor's degrees; 487, various types of master's degrees. Only seven Ph. D.'s and one Ed. D. were reported to The Crisis.

Tuskegee graduated 15 D.V.M.'s; Howard, 75 M.D.'s, 42 D.D.S.'s and three Ph. D.'s in chemistry. Meharry graduated 67 M.D.'s, five with diplomas in dental hygiene, and five with certificates in medical technology.

Howard heads the list in total number of students enrolled, 5,959; Southern University is second with 4,384; Tuskegee third with 3,945; and Florida A&M fourth with 3,133.

Detailed information about honor graduates and statistics:

Howard University reports the following honor graduates: Ella Grey Mizzell, B. A. summa cum laude, history; Paul Lawrence Brown, B. S. summa cum laude, physics; and James Wallace Breedlove, B. S. summa cum laude, electrical engineering. Howard conferred honorary degrees upon Henry Joel Cadbury, D.H.L.; Lloyd Augustus Hall, Sc. D.; Dorothy Maynor, D. Mus.; and Tom Mboya, LL. D.

Mrs. Ruby Bryant was highest honor graduate at Alcorn and Juanita Woodson at Albany State.

REFLECTIONS ON LITTLE ROCK

THE return of Negroes to Central High School proceeded smoothly despite the opposition of a few diehard segregationists. Three Negro girls were also enrolled, without incident, in the Hall High School, which marked desegregation of the second of the city's four senior high schools. Little Rock school board members said that the atmosphere in the schools "couldn't have been more normal under the circumstances," but the board later added, "any circumstances."

One irreconcilable segregationist, Attorney John A. McLeod, Jr., invoked Act No. 7 (House Bill No. 5) of the 1958 Extraordinary Session of the Arkansas General Assembly, a virtually unknown statute, to keep his daughter from having to study with Negroes. This law, approved on September 12, 1958, provides for the setting up of separate classes for white and Negro students "under certain conditions." Attorney McLeod actually wants segregated classes within an integrated school. This desire is at best a counsel of defeat, and it is time that he realizes the fact that integrated schools, even in Little Rock, are here to stay. If there are segregated classes, the NAACP will file suit. In the McLaurin versus the University of Oklahoma case, the United States Supreme Court ruled that once admitted to an integrated school a Negro could not be segregated within that school.

LITTLE ROCK became a world symbol of American cant and rancorous racism because of the word and strut of Governor Orval E. Faubus. His bellicose flourishes created the Little Rock imbroglio as well as the impression that Negroes were moving too fast in demanding integration. Actually, the Little Rock story goes back four years, to 1955, when a group of local Negro parents filed suit against the local school board demanding immediate integration. But the school officials had an integration plan of their own. Theirs was to begin in 1957 with the high schools and to extend over a period of approximately six years. In this way they felt they would be acting in conformity with the United States Supreme Court decision of May 31, 1955, which said that Southern states should proceed toward public school integration "with all deliberate speed."

When the school board planned to accept seventeen Negroes in 1957 among the 1,900 students at Central High, Governor Faubus started his hysterical whoopings about preventing row and rumpus and ordered out 270 National Guardsmen "to prevent disorder," but actually to keep Negro children from becoming students at a "white school." The whole world is familiar with the main sequence—President Eisenhower's ordering of the 327th Battle Group of the 101st Airborne Division to Little Rock, the harrassing of the Negro students and finally the expulsion of Minniejean Brown, the graduation of Ernest Green, the special session of the Arkansas legislature to pass anti-integration laws, Governor Faubus's closing of the four Little Rock high schools, invalidation of the state's anti-integration laws by a federal court.

LITTLE ROCK, it seems, has taught us several things. That Southern states must accept the implications of the United States Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954. That Negroes are not moving too fast when they ask for immediate integration: after four years, Little Rock's Negroes received only token integration. That the "private school plans" proved a failure: it was economically infeasible. That even the segregationists prefer some integration to no education. That closed schools damaged Little Rock's effort to attract new industry. That most of the public potholer over integration was stirred up by rural outsiders rather than by the local burghers. That when local authorities enforce the law and the police "crack down" on segregative extremists schools can be desegregated.

Finally, we must not forget that desegregation is still a live issue in Little Rock. 'Tis true that the militant segregationists were defeated, but they were not defeated by integrationists. They were defeated by people who had begun to show widespread impatience with closed schools and the attempted purging of Little Rock's teachers thought to be favorable to integration. The present victory has left most whites with mixed feelings; most Negroes, with disappointment.

SOUTH AFRICAN PEONAGE

WHEN AFRICANS are arrested for infraction of the pass laws (Africans are required to have ten passes)—which is a criminal offense—they are not charged but persuaded by the police that they can escape prosecution by "volunteering" for three to six months work on a private farm at ten cents a day. These "pass raids" always seem to coincide with the predictable seasonable labor requirements of the white farmers.

Once the Africans "volunteer" they are hauled away to work white farms from sunup to sundown under club-swinging boss boys. Beatings are a daily routine and the fatally flogged are buried on the farms in unmarked graves. The Nationalists have even persuaded white farmers to build private jails which the government then stocks with long-term prisoners. There are now nearly twenty of these jails.

This degradation of African labor is an inseparable part of apartheid, the effort of Afrikaners to maintain white supremacy at all costs. It deserves the condemnation of all right-thinking men.

What the Branches Are Doing

Alaska: Mrs. Blanche L. McSmith, president of the ANCHORAGE branch, has been appointed by Governor William A. Egan, under the terms of a new law passed by the legislature before its adjournment on April 18, to the Alaska house of representatives to serve on an interim basis until the next session of the legislature in 1960. Mrs. McSmith succeeds John Rader, who resigned on April 27 to become Alaska attorney-general. She is the first Negro ever to serve in an Alaska legislature, although not the first woman. She makes the fourth woman legislator now serving in the legislature. Her husband, an electrician, runs an electrical shop in Anchorage.

Mrs. McSmith says that her legislative plans call for introducing amendments to the civil-rights laws now on the books, strengthening present laws to include non-discrimination amendments in the fields of housing and employment, and the giving of vocational education to unskilled workers.

Arizona: Clifton P. Lander, president of the TUCSON branch, was guest speaker at a "Black and White Rabbit Night" held at the local Mountain View Presbyterian Church.

The branch observed "Freedom Sunday" on June 7 at the Mt. Calvary Baptist Church, with H. L. LaGrone, outstanding civic leader of Albuquerque, New Mexico, as the guest speaker.

California: Of the 108 school districts in LOS ANGELES COUNTY, only twelve hire Negroes, says the California Advisory Committee on Civil Rights. There are three reasons why no Negro teachers are hired:

CORRECTION — WASHINGTON BRANCH FF CONTRIBUTION

The Life Membership office wishes to correct an error made regarding the amount of life membership monies credited to the Washington, D. C., branch during the period January 1, 1959, to July 6, 1959. Our list in the 1959 Freedom Fund report, which was distributed at the 1959 FF Dinner at the Waldorf Astoria, credited the Washington, D. C., branch with a total of $960.00. This branch had actually remitted a total of $3,352.41 during this six month period. We wish to offer our apologies to the branch president, Rev. E. Franklin Jackson and his members for any embarrassment this error may have caused.

Illinois: The CHICAGO branch has recommended a four-point program, designed to ease tensions upon schools in communities where there is racial unrest, to school superintendent Benjamin Willis.

The branch has also called upon Superintendent Willis to investigate the "unsatisfactory" rating given a teacher who interceded on behalf of a Negro boy involved in a racial incident at the Harper High School. The rating of unsatisfactory came on the heels of general harrassment of the teacher, according to Rev. Carl Fuqua, branch executive secretary. The Rhode Island: Mrs. Marguerite Belafonte was keynote speaker at the membership campaign meeting of the PROVIDENCE branch held on May 6.

Southwest Region: Field secretary Clarence Laws has noted the following activities along the NAACP battlefront in his monthly report dated June 26:

For the third time in three years, the U. S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a district court order for the desegregation of the public schools of NEW ORLEANS, Louisiana.

On June 18, Negro plaintiffs in this suit asked the federal court to order the New Orleans school board to present a definite plan for desegregation "at the earliest practicable date." It is anticipated that the court will conduct a hearing within the near future for the purpose of acting upon this recent petition.

The White Citizens Council of Louisiana continued its program of purging Negroes from the registration rolls. At Washington Parish 1,377 Negroes out of 1,517 have been challenged. Eight whites have been challenged. Persons challenged have ten days in which to show cause why they should not be dropped from the registration rolls.

On June 23, two representatives of the Civil Rights Commission talked with William Bailey, Jr., president of the Hammond branch, and invited him to be a witness at the civil-rights hearing set for Shreveport, July 13. Following the hearing, Negroes at Hammond, parish seat of Washington Parish, plan to file a suit against the registrar of voters and others conspiring to deprive them of their rights.

West Virginia: The funeral of T. G. Nutter, president and founder of the West Virginia State Conference, was held on Friday, June 26, at the First Baptist Church, Charleston, West Virginia.

Mr. Nutter was born in Princess Anne, Maryland, on June 15, 1876. He was a member of the West Virginia Legislature, 1919-1921; Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks for three years; active in the Pythians and a practicing attorney until his death.

He was a member of the National NAACP Board, and a vice-president until his death; founder and president of the West Virginia State Conference of Branches; president of the Charleston branch for many years; attorney for the Association in many civil-rights cases, including school desegregation cases in West Virginia.

Mr. Nutter investigated racial incidents all over his state, and as late as 1954 he investigated the trouble in Greenbrier County over school desegregation which had resulted from the activities of Bryant W. Bowles, organizer of the National Association for the Advancement of White People. He leaves no immediate family.

HELPING OUT ONCE AGAIN—Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, congratulates Melvin Newton (L), chairman of Pennsylvania Station Red Caps NAACP membership campaign committee. The Red Caps kicked off their annual NAACP membership drive on March 15. They have conducted successful campaigns for the past ten years. Pictured, from L, are co-chairmen William Majors, John Mathieu, Joseph I. Pleasant, Jr., and Thomas Richardson, all veteran Red Caps.

Following the refusal of state officials to make available to members of the Civil Rights Commission records of certain registrars of voters in Louisiana, the Commission decided to hold a public hearing at Shreveport on July 13. Voter registration leaders at Shreveport obtained more than 70 affidavits from persons in north and northeast Louisiana who alleged deprivation of their voting rights.

There were witnesses to testify at the hearing from a half dozen parishes. Field secretary Clarence Laws submitted a statement which was read into the record.

New Orleans and Lake Charles held fashion shows featuring local talents after Mrs. Margurite Belafonte was forced to cancel her tour because of the illness of her daughter. Lake Charles used the occasion to crown the winner of the Widow Queen Contest. More than $1,000 was raised in this effort.

After several fruitless efforts the Shreveport branch was reorganized on June 17. The President is R. L. Williams, 1459 Murphy Street; the secretary, Madeline Brewer, 2755 Ashton Street. Mr. Williams was branch president in the 1940's when it enjoyed its peak membership of more than 1,400.

At a meeting at Monroe, on June 24, a steering committee was appointed to reorganize the Monroe branch. Monroe was the first city to feel the vote-registration purge. In 1956, there were more than 6,000 Negro voters. Today, there are only 776! Fear, apathy, and distrust of leadership are given as the chief reasons for present unhappy conditions.

Mrs. D. A. Combre, president of the Louisiana State Conference of Branches and leading NAACP fund raiser in the state, has written to the director of branches Gloster B. Current about extending NAACP work in Louisiana. Mr. Current has promised Mrs. Combre to explore the matter fully during the National Convention.

On June 8, the HOUSTON, Texas, school board, by a vote of 4 to 1, agreed to call a special election to determine whether the public schools of Houston should be desegregated. The dissenting vote was cast by Mrs. Charles E. White, a Negro member of the board, who took the position that the board should get together and work out an integration plan.

The state law requires that petitions seeking such an election must be signed by twenty per cent of the school district's qualified voters. Attorney Francis Williams, president of the Houston branch, is reported to have told the Houston newspapers that the Association would ask voters not to sign the petitions.

A news release by the Southwest regional office pointed out that such an election would have no effect upon the court order to the Houston school board to desegregate its schools, "with all deliberate speed."

For more than two hours on June 12, attorneys for the Houston school board questioned plaintiffs in the school desegregation suit in what appeared to have been an attempt to cite NAACP attorneys with barratry. However, the parents, under sworn testimony, did not waver from their statements that they had sought the assistance of the NAACP and had not been sought by the Association or its attorney as plaintiffs.

Last month, after a two-year stalemate, NAACP lawyers asked United States District Judge Ben C. C. Connally to order immediate integration of the Houston schools.

In a televised meeting of Houston school board, Mrs. Charles E. White charged that she had received only one communication from the school board attorney. It appears that other members of the board have been receiving communications regularly on the subject.

RURAL SOUTHERN FOLK CHARACTER

The Rainbow Sign: A Southern Documentary.
By Alan Lomax. New York: Duell, Sloan and Pearce, 1959. 209pp. $4.00.

Many have proclaimed our debt to the Lomaxes, père et fils, and this newest contribution brings the indebtedness to even greater heights.

The Rainbow Sign, a small, modest volume, is a valuable addition to the limited fund of authentic folk literature found exclusively in our rural South.

Although I am a Negro, I am a New Englander of a different generation, therefore totally unfamiliar with the book's milieu. Yet I was none the less deeply touched. This, I believe, is evidence that these stories transcend the less important ethnic identification, giving them an appeal that is universal.

Nora, the author tells us, has nieces who are counterparts of those young girls who entered the schools the Supreme Court opened for them, walking in dignity while being spat upon. But they all, also, bear kinship with Anne Frank and other unnamed young people elsewhere who have shown courage and nobility.

The silent anguish of the father who must witness his son's torture and his wife's defilement is the cry of all victims from Buchenwald to South Africa's Sophiatown. The sanctity and godliness of Rev. Renfreu is the humanity and lofty morality of the old Hebrew prophets, Amos, Job, and, of course, Hosea.

Part of the success of this folklorist is his sensitivity and human spirit, which penetrate the color curtain. There is keen insight into his subjects, as well as into himself, as he writes:

"I set about interviewing a representative group of Negro folk singers on tape. In the process I had to reform my own Southern manners, which were a combination of shyness, arrogance and false preconception. I had also to overcome their ingrained but understandable reluctance to talk frankly to a white man. Bitter experience had taught them to maintain a whole range of fictions which support the southern whites' feeling of unchallenged superiority."

The author's objective is to set forth the way the rural southern folk character "has travelled, and what the journey has cost." He deplores the fact that Western civilization is "rigid, so complacent and careless of human values," and its "inability to accept another group on its own terms." This causes him to "almost detest Western civilization."

The author, being a sensitive seeker, discovers that the leitmotiv of folk songs and characters is "rejection,"—tragic, cruel, rejection. "Even the most timid and compliant southern Negroes are restless and miserable." Certainly this is far removed from the usual contented slave stereotype.

With prudence and integrity, collector Lomax selected his tools wisely. Making use of a tape recorder there is not the loss that would result from the inevitable cultural overtones of a third party narrator.

This classic southern documentary will be warmly welcomed by those sickened by the fraudulent and saccharine work of Octavius Roy Cohen, weary of the cheap stereotype humor of Amos and Andy, degraded and humiliated by the sentimental drivel of Peola, Pinky, and a succession of their followers.

PUERTO RICAN MIGRANTS

Island in the City: The World of Spanish Harlem. By Dan Wakefield. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1959. 278pp. $4.00.

Island in the City is the story of the latest strangers to New York City and it is not a pleasant or beautiful one. The conditions in Puerto Rico, from which most of the 600,000 people of Spanish-speaking Harlem have come, are well-known to many but the facts of the conditions under which they live in New York City are not so well-known and much of what is known is inaccurate. "Since most Puerto Ricans in New York City live in slum conditions, it is part of the popular myth of their migration that they created the slums. The truth is, rather, they inherited the slums." Mr. Wakefield is a journalist and writer but some of his conclusions are sociological. He writes, "There is no place so costly to live as a tenement. To do it with any security, a man would need a staff of lawyers, priests, seers, repairmen, accountants, and secretaries. He might then be able to insure his rights and a minimum standard of living." Imagine a landlord raising the rent and contending "she was now living in a furnished apartment" after "she had taken an unfurnished apartment and bought some secondhand furniture and moved it in."

One may learn many things from reading this book. Island in the City is a contemporary, realistic portrayal, factual, and most descriptive whether the author is describing a home, a character, New York's skyline, the journey from Puerto Rico, a smile, a seance of air and water spirits, going to church, racket unions, a conversation, traffic, narcotic addicts or a neighborhood gang. All these things are described or discussed in this book.

There is a very brief history of the Puerto Rican migration to New York beginning in the early 1800's and the various migrations into and out of Harlem. "The word 'Harlem' has come to mean Negro and slum to the world at large; it once meant Dutch and suburban, and later on, Irish and Jewish and middle class. But despite these changes the history of Harlem contains a curious continuity. It has always, for someone, meant Utopia. It has always, for someone, signified the end of a journey."

One learns that the migrants from Puerto Rico very seldom refer to themselves as Puerto Ricans because it "has become a stigma . . . they tell outsiders they are Dominicans, Cubans, or South Americans." The Puerto Ricans have to face the question of color

"But the darker-skinned migrants did not face the new discrimination of the mainland with all the innocence that often is believed. Because there is no legal discrimination based on color in Puerto Rico, it is commonly simply stated that "there is no discrimination . . . When the Puerto Ricans meet discrimination on the mainland it is not altogether a new experience." An intra-color problem is indicated: "In almost every case the Puerto Rican addict is the darkest-skinned member of his family. He may actually have very light skin" but he is the darkest-skinned member of his family. One also learns something of the attitudes of Puerto Ricans towards Negroes and that being brown or black does not make a Puerto Rican a Negro. "It doesn't take long to learn that the Negroes are lowest on the scale in American life, and in order not to be like them the darker Puerto Ricans are often the most reluctant to learn English.

It will surprise most readers to learn that the only completely self-supporting Protestant religious sect among the Puerto Ricans is the Pentecostal; that "many Puerto Ricans were killed in Korea almost as a direct result of not knowing English, and thereby not being able to understand the commands. The per cent of casualties was almost twice as great for Puerto Ricans as for residents of the United States. It may also come as a surprise that the Puerto Ricans "have developed no criminal gangs of adults as the Irish, Jews, and Italians did."

"Sweat Without Profit" is a vivid presentation of the exploitation of Puerto Ricans by the garment industry and racket unions: "They give them 35c for every garment, no matter how hard it is or what it is." In 1958 some Puerto Ricans worked "a seventy-two hour week, at less than a dollar an hour." "The Invisible Man is an excellent analysis of the political parties and the Puerto Ricans.

Reading Island in the City will help destroy the stereotypes of the life of the Puerto Ricans in New York City. It will help the reader to understand why the Puerto Ricans are in their present condition, what are some of the problems, and what is being done about them.

Caste, Class, & Race: A Study in Social Dynamics. By Oliver Cromwell Cox. New York: Monthly Review Press, 1959. XXXVIII+624pp. $7.50.

Dr. Cox examines caste, class, and racial relations in terms of Marxism; he believes, despite evidence to the contrary, that race prejudice is coterminous with capitalism and that there were no class distinctions before the rise of industrialism and free enterprise. He even claims that "fully developed social-class systems are also unknown to ancient society" despite existence of the Eupatrid oligarchs and the georgoi in Greece and the classicus and populus in Rome, and hierarchic divisions in all societies. Our author is often confused; he is bookish, a citateur, in the sense that he stretches living fact to fit his thesis; hence his theory wobbles. This is the reissue of a book first published in 1948.

cannot excuse the mobs and the bombs of Dixie.

We shall not be sidetracked by the ridiculous claim that we are "going too fast and pushing too hard." We remember that today, 96 years after the Emancipation Proclamation, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi are fighting the Federal Government—as they did in the Civil War—to keep the ballot from Negro citizens. If this be speed, then a hippopotamus is a greyhound.

We shall not be deterred by threats, by special laws and taxes, by economic reprisals or by violence. We know violence of old. We have seen its face in the Klan and in the lyncher. We know meanness and hate; we have felt these from the printed pages, from legislative halls and, alas, from some pulpits. We have met all these in days gone by and beaten them; they did not halt our forward march then and they cannot do so now. Our little children have looked these old enemies in the eye and have brushed them aside.

NO PANACEAS OR PLACEBOS

There is no panacea, no short cut, no easy road to freedom and equality. It is a man's journey to a man's prize. It is not for playboys and schemers and weaklings. Those who seek to blame every tribulation upon racial mistreatment while failing to measure up in honesty and integrity and in respect for the basic values of life will not win the goal. They will be dependent children to their deaths. Those who take without giving will not sit at the freedom table, for freedom is a responsibility as well as a right. Its burdens must be borne even as its joys are tasted.

We condemn the propaganda that Negro citizens must "earn" their rights through good behavior. Good behavior — responsible, adult, law-abiding behavior—wins the respect of our fellow citizens, which we value and seek, but no American is required to "earn" his rights as a citizen. His human rights came from God and his citizenship rights came from the Constitution.

Everything in our past history says we will win. The men and women we reared up from slavery to emancipation and on through the years of trial were giants in the spirit with which they met life. The white men and women who aided them were giants, too, in the army of justice and decency.

Their dreams, their courage and their determination are ours. Their love of this great country of ours is one with our love. Their faith in God is the same faith we call upon today.

If we use with dedication the heritage of which this Golden Jubilee is proud and shining symbol, nothing on earth can stand against us and in that day "this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom."
